ABOUT RCY

B.C.'s Office of the Representative for Children and Youth (RCY) supports young people and their families in dealing with the provincial child- and youth-serving system. The Rep provides oversight to the child welfare system and makes recommendations to improve it.

Jennifer Charlesworth is B.C.'s Representative for Children and Youth. Jennifer has a deep interest in children's rights, child and youth mental health, youth transitioning into healthy adulthood, and ensuring that First Nations, Métis, Inuit and Urban Indigenous children and youth are better served and are strongly connected to their cultures and families.

YOUR RIGHTS

Every child and youth in B.C. has the right to be safe, healthy, educated and heard. RCY's Advocates provide support to young people (and adults who contact us for them) who need help with programs provided or funded by government.

RCY Advocates ensure that the rights and interests of children and youth are protected and that their opinions are heard and considered.

YOUTH IN CARE & YOUNG ADULTS

All children, youth and young adults who have been in care or receiving government services deserve to have the same opportunities for success that other young people have.

HOW WE HELP

RCY Advocates can help you:

- Know your rights and what to do if they are ignored
- Connect with programs you need
- Speak up to help solve a problem
- Be part of decisions about your care
- With your transition out of ministry care.

What you say will be kept private.

MONITORING & INVESTIGATION

RCY also monitors and evaluates government-funded programs to make recommendations to improve them, and monitors key developments in Indigenous child welfare.

If a child or youth receiving government services dies or is injured, RCY may review or investigate.
